

Complaints on Reading Light aired at D.P.U. hearing

by Arlene Surprenant

Though their demeanor was sedate and the shouting restrained, the 50 or so residents, officials and businessmen who showed up at last Wednesday's Department of Public Utilities (DPU) hearing at the Wilmington Town Hall got their point across.

Chamber of Commerce President Nicholas Balog seemed to sum it up best when he asked DPU officials Robert Keegan (DPU Commissioner), Stephen Kalinowsky (hearing officer), and Robert Werlin (DPU general counsel) to "intercede in our behalf" in eliminating "the gross and unfair" practices of the Reading Municipal Light Department (RMLD).

The alleged discriminatory practices, including uneven street light rates, unfair distribution of "in lieu of tax" payments, no public hearings prior to rate increases, and no representation on the RMLD board, were outlined in petitions sent to the DPU in late April by the Chamber of Commerce and the town of Wilmington. Wednesday's hearing was requested by the Chamber to afford Wilmington RMLD consumers a chance to air their concerns.

John L. Reid struck a blow for homeowners allegedly frustrated by the RMLD's "disgraceful way of handling customers." Waving a stack of bills and cancelled checks, Reid told a story of questionable billing practices, computer error, and a general runaround that ended up with Reading Light threatening to attach his home for alleged lack of payment on a reduced bill. He accused the RMLD of ignoring not only town officials but the general public and sought some relief from the DPU officials, relief which Keegan assured him would be forthcoming.

Homeowner Paul Sheridan expressed anger over Reading Light's practice of estimating monthly electric bills to step up its cash flow, while only reading meters bi-monthly. Tina Rudolph queried why RMLD chose not to create special rates for residents with all-electric homes.

Representatives from Wilmington's industrial community spoke out on unfair rate structure. Rate increases have shifted higher costs onto the industrial customers.

Anthony Mack of Sweetheart Products Group said his company had no objection to paying its fair share but "it is clear to us we are subsidizing the town of Reading." As the largest single customer of Reading Light, with annual light bill of $3 million, Mack went on, Sweetheart has tried to conserve power. But with rising electrical costs, unfair rate structures, and the discriminatory practices of the RMLD, this has been impossible, he said.

Mack also pointed out that Sweetheart's Georgia plant has electric costs approximately one third lower than the Wilmington plant, even though they are about the same size. And, he added, because of the unfair practices of the utility company, Sweetheart will only expand outside of Wilmington.

Robert Atkinson of Compu-graphic said "we have been treated as beggars" in meetings with the RMLD and maintained that the department does have some responsibility as a private utility.

Local officials and attorneys present echoed his words.

Town Counsel Alan Altman pointed out, in his opening remarks, that Wilmington is only seeking "a fair and equitable" solution which, hopefully, is not disastrous to the town of Reading. He said Wilmington thought the RMLD would be fair, but that department's "singlehandedness," he said, caused "some havoc" and resulted in "discrimination against all users in the town of Wilmington."

Altman informed the DPU that, in self-defense, Wilmington has retained the services of the prestigious consulting firm Arthur D. Little and is seriously exploring other options. These options include gas generation and buying from another power source, such as Massachusetts Electric Co.

RMLD attorney Kenneth Barna, the only person present to speak favorable of Reading Light, was brief and to the point. He contended that RMLD had taken "much care and effort" with respect to rate designation and further stated that rates for all classes are the same in each town. He said that the new rates were designed to encourage conservation, and that this was working.

Both Chamber of Commerce attorney Charles Harik and Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski, who chose to be sworn in as a witness, reiterated their concerns outlined in their petitions.

Perhaps some of the most accusatory statements were made by Lynnfield Town Counsel S. Peter Gorshel who was present, he said, because Lynnfield, too, "is tired of being victimized."

Gorshel endorsed Wilmington's actions. He condemned the RMLD for "unethical and immoral practices," saying Lynnfield had taken some action of its own and been "stonewalled" by Reading Light.

Later in the evening, Gorshel blasted RMLD because "they've forgotten they're a municipal agency and are behaving more like a monopoly." He then charged the DPU to become "administrative activists" and adopt limited jurisdiction over the RMLD.

Keegan assured Gorshel and those present that the DPU would extend

John Reid (standing) of Lane Street made a strong presentation before the Mass. Dept. of Public Utilities in a hearing last Wednesday evening in the Town Hall. Reid cited a history of irregularities in his account with Reading Light. DPU Commissioner Robert Keegan (with hand to his face) assured Reid that the matter would be looked into. Seated behind Reid is Lynnfield Town Counsel S. Peter Gorshel.

Billing complaints

Tech bills paid

by Arlene Surprenant

Benjamin Wolk, superintendent-director of the Shawsheen Valley Technical School assured the Tech School Committee Tuesday night that outstanding assessment bills for July and August have been paid by the Town of Wilmington.

According to Wolk, he and Tech Business Manager Robert Brooks collected the payments last Thursday after receiving a call from Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski saying the bills would be paid then. However, said Brooks, the five percent increase due under the district agreement and accumulated interest will not be paid unless there is an affirmative vote to that effect at December's special town meeting. He added he had already talked over this matter with the Boston firm of Ropes and Gray as instructed by a unanimous school committee vote.

"The town manager insisted on paying at the old rate and there's nothing we can do," said Wolk.

Several committee members seemed to disagree with this view after the meeting. They felt if voters failed to approve the increase in December and the full amount wasn't paid then, a lawsuit against the town of Wilmington would be the only alternative.

The Wilmington Town Meeting in April refused a request for additional funds for Tech. Subsequently, the other towns in the district voted the increase, which meant that Wilmington would have to go along with it. The increase is scheduled to go before a special town meeting on December 2.

Storm debris pickup

While most residents of Wilmington have been putting limbs at the side of the road for town pickup, others have paid private haulers to remove debris in the wake of Hurricane Gloria.

Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski said that the town will remove all limbs placed at curbside. Town employees will haul material to Abigail's Island for burning.

Residents are prohibited from burning debris outdoors except during a specified period in winter and early spring. The town has received a special state permit for burning debris from the hurricane.

The town, said Stapczynski, has spent about $33,000 so far on hurricane cleanup.

Meeting tonight on nursing home proposal

Proponents of a 120-bed nursing home will meet with neighbors on Wednesday night. The meeting is slated for 7 p.m. at the former Garden of Eden Country Club, now the home of The Bible Speaks.

The Mediplex Group, a firm which operates several nursing homes, proposes to build a nursing home on Hillside Way, in a rural residential area. The building would cover about 33,000 square feet of land, with one-story and some two-story construction.

Mediplex bought two parcels of land at 16 Hillside Way last year from Henry Keeler. The firm paid $150,000 for about 10.7 acres.

The nursing home would be called the Wilmington Woods Nursing Care Center. The cost of the facility would be $4,882,100. In addition to the 120 beds, there would be provision for 18 day-care patients. The nursing home would employ a maximum of 40 employees on the largest shift, according to John Tressler, a company spokesman. He said that the company was making no plans for expansion of the facility.

The company has filed for a certificate of need, before the Mass. Dept. of Public Health, a required process for any large capital expenditure in the health care field. The DPH will hold a public hearing on that matter at the Wilmington Town Hall on Monday, Oct. 21 at 7 p.m.

A special permit would be required from the Wilmington Board of Appeals. Wilmington's zoning law allows a nursing home in a residential area under a special permit.

Several residents of the Chestnut Street - Hillside Way area have expressed their opposition to the facility, citing the narrow, winding road as being inadequate to handle the traffic associated with the nursing home.

Meeting on sewers

A discussion of sewer discharges by Wilmington industry will take place on Tuesday evening, October 22, at 7:30 p.m. The Board of Water and Sewer Commissioners plan to discuss a discharge monitoring system in Wilmington sewers. Officers and principals of the industrial firms in Wilmington are being invited to attend.

There is to be a discussion of a proposed monitoring program for Wilmington's industrial sewers. Some sewer mains, last summer, were badly damaged by corrosive industrial wastewaters.

The monitoring program is to ensure that there will be compliance with the town's sewer use regulations and individual discharge permits. The commissioners hope that need of compliance will be understood by industrial users, and that as a result excessive increases in sewer user charges can be avoided.

Letters have been mailed to all firms in Wilmington using the sewer systems for industrial purposes.

9,000 Scouts to camp in Tewksbury

Traffic may be tied up in Tewksbury this weekend, but it will be a field day for ladies wanting to cross the street.

The Livingston Street area, and land of the Tewksbury State Hospital are to be the site this weekend of a three-day camporee for Boy Scouts of eastern Massachusetts and Rhode Island. They will be celebrating the 75th anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America. Over 9,000 Scouts will be in attendance, and there are to be an additional 300 Cub Scouts on Sunday.

Officially it will be known as the Massachusetts Jamboree weekend, or Mass Jam. That acronym, unfortunately perhaps, might well describe the traffic problems which may ensue.

The selectmen of Tewksbury two weeks ago discussed making Livingston Street a "closed" street for the three day jamboree, meaning that no auto traffic would be allowed. A volunteer organization has distributed maps to newspapers of eastern Massachusetts, showing the "best" auto routes, and Livingston Street according to that map will be a one way street, from East Street to Main Street.

The Tewksbury Police Department does not seem to know of the selectmen's desires. Nor does it know of the volunteer organization planning a re-routing of traffic in Tewksbury for the weekend.

Weekend traffic

Scout officials have prepared a traffic diagram for Tewksbury which would make Livingston Street a one-way street for the weekend, with traffic running from East Street to Main Street. As of Tuesday, however, the Tewksbury Police knew nothing about the plan.

The volunteer organizations plan shows parking off Pinnacle Street, in a field that is often used for Boy Scout activities. It is a mile or so from that field to the registration desk, which seems to be the small cabin 1000 feet from East Street, used in the winter to direct snowmobile activities. From the snowmobile cabin it is another half mile to the camping ground.

A plan for the Scout camping area utilizes playing fields easterly of Livingston Street. Headquarters for the staff will be, it seems, in the center of that area. The five baseball diamonds west of Livingston Street seem to be reserved for "activity" areas. The Pop Warner football field will be off limits.

Registration will begin at 6 a.m. on Saturday. The opening ceremony is slated for 12:45 p.m. and is being called "Pride of the Past."

The entire weekend, through Monday, is being devoted to Scouting. There will be competitions and challenges and opportunities to meet Scouts from other councils.

Scouts from 12 different councils will participate, representing 159 different towns.

Volunteers are asked to bring

Tewksbury town meeting rejects 5 minute speaking limit

Tewksbury Town meeting voters Monday spurned the concept of cutting in half the amount of time someone can speak on the town meeting floor. They did agree, however, to increase from $10,000 to $50,000 the amount of money a department head would have to seek above a finance committee recommendation before a secret ballot vote is required.

Voters went along with the argument that there are some issues which require more discussion than others and denied the attempt to cut the amount of time people can speak on each issue from 10 minutes to five minutes. They also agreed that inflation has placed less value on a difference of $10,000.

Current town bylaws do not allow voters to address an article for more than 10 minutes unless the assembly agrees to extend the time limit. Town bylaws also currently stipulate that a voter can not talk on an article for a second time until all others waiting to be heard on the issue have spoken.

The bylaws also stipulate that a secret ballot vote must be taken whenever a department head asks for $10,000 more than the finance committee recommends be given for a warrant article. It will now take a difference of $50,000 before the secret ballot vote is triggered.

The measures before the assembly Monday were sponsored by Town Clerk Elizabeth Carey. She said she sponsored them because several people have complained to her that town meetings get "drawn out" by long winded, repetitious talks and too many secret ballot votes.

She proposed cutting the time allotted for speaking on an article in half, but retained all other components of the bylaw. She argued that most speakers already take less than their allotted ten minutes, and that those wishing to speak longer could do so with the vote of the assembly.

Selectman Paul Sullivan drew a big laugh from the crowd when saying he was in favor of the concept and quipped he could probably "speak in favor of it for 10 or 15 minutes." Sullivan said he felt people do not need the full ten minutes currently allowed. "Most points can be made in five minutes," he said.

Selectman Bill Hallisey, however, disagreed. He said limiting the amount of speaking time to under ten minutes is placing more "controls on town meeting." He added, "If you limit the amount of speaking at a town meeting you may as well limit town meeting."

Finance Committee Chairman Jay Kelley said that several times the finance committee needs more than ten minutes to explain their recommendations while Assessor Norman Boudreau and Hallisey agreed that some issues brought to town meeting are so complex that they require more discussion.

In other town meeting action Monday voters:

— Agreed to pay some $36,736 in unpaid bills mostly incurred when budgets ran out of money last year. Those bills included, $21,685.53 to town counsel Charles Zaroulis, a $1,054 phone bill incurred at town hall, and $8,000 to valley sprayers for insect spraying done under a board of health contract.

— Agreed to pay $26,297.86 for emergency water bought from the towns of Billerica and Andover and the city of Lowell.

— Agreed to allow Building Inspector William Granfield to transfer $324 from his current salary account into his own pay check to cover the salary he lost when the civil service commission overturned a selectmen three day suspension.

— Agreed to pay $2,678 in overdue medical bills incurred by Officer Donald Ryan during treatment of an injury suffered on the job.

— Agreed to pay the $99.61 the council on aging owed to the Colonial Gas Company.

— Allowed three articles to be withdrawn from the warrant. The articles asked the voters to accept certain sections of state law in order to impose a local motel/hotel room tax, create a minimum teacher salary of $18,000 and accept state grant funds to supplement teacher compensation. According to town bylaws, state laws can only be accepted at the annual town meeting and even then only by a secret ballot.

— Agreed that Gerald Colton of Catamount Road should be allowed to take the civil service exam for a fireman even though he exceeds the age limit for taking the test.

— To rescind an annual town meeting vote calling for the transfer of some $300,000 in free cash into the fiscal 1986 budget because there was no free cash available after the fiscal 1985 budget.

— And accepted the Committee of Interested Residents' gift of a Mico Kaufman sculpted bronze statue monument honoring Anne Sullivan's efforts to teach her best known student Helen Keller.

Teacher strikes out in try to get reimbursed for stolen computer

Tewksbury Town Meeting voters Monday delivered the third strike pitch to a teacher some say went beyond the call of duty to help his students. Voters denied reimbursement funds to junior high school teacher Richard Zbieg whose personal Apple computer was stolen from the school in October 1984.

It took 45 minutes and three votes before the dust cleared and the final ruling came in on the school committee's request to reimburse Zbieg the $905 he is out because he brought the machine into the school to help decrease the student to machine ratio in his computer literacy course. The same measure was defeated at the annual town meeting which set up the need for a three-fourths majority to pass.

The 179-65 final vote failed to reach the three-fourths majority of 183 by four votes.

In introducing the measure to voters, School Committee Chairman Dr. Carol Wareing said Zbieg purchased the machine and brought it into the school to compliment eight others in a computer lab. Neither the school committee nor department asked Zbieg to bring the machine to the school, she said. He did so on his own in an effort to help the program.

The school was broken into October 24, 1984 and several pieces of equipment including Zbieg's one-month-old computer, were stolen. Subsequently, the committee passed a policy stating that any teacher bringing equipment or personal belongings onto school property does so at their own risk.

Meanwhile, she said the committee felt that Zbieg's dedication to getting what has turned out to be a successful computer literacy program off the ground should warrant committee support for reimbursing what his homeowner's insurance would not cover. His policy did cover a maximum of only $500 of the total $1405 value because the machine was not on the insured premises when stolen.

Finance Committee Chairman Jay Kelley told voters, many of whom were Tewksbury teachers, that his panel was recommending the measure be denied because they feared it would set a "precedent" of other town employees seeking reimbursement for personal goods lost or stolen on town property.

Kelley said many times employees bring personal items into work and don't go home with them. He also said that private industry does not reimburse employees for personal items lost or stolen at the workplace.

The debate over the issue, at times, turned very emotional with charges that the meeting was stacked with school employees exercising a special interest vote. Selectman Paul Sullivan, however, refuted that claim by saying he didn't think the article was placed on the warrant "in anticipation of a flow of teachers" into the meeting. And if a lot of teachers were present Monday, he added, they should be praised for being concerned enough about their town to attend town meeting and vote their minds.

Selectman Bill Hallisey stood against the measure, however. He said he opposed the article, but not the reimbursement. He said he too feared there would be more and more claims for personal items lost or stolen at work making their way to the town meeting floor and also wondered why the school committee did not reimburse Zbieg.

The school committee, however, can not unilaterally supply funds to an employee for the purpose of buying a piece of equipment. Only town meeting has that power, said School Committeeman Jim Sullivan.

Health Board member Joan Dunlevy, who praised Zbieg "as a man who cares about others," asked voters not to "victimize him again." She said the town "needs to encourage teachers" to show more dedication to their work and Zbieg should be reimbursed because of the "spirit" in which he shared his machine with others.

One parent, however, feared granting the reimbursement would open Pandora's box. "I can see it's a small amount of money, but I can also see a Pandora's box opening," she said.

Another parent, however, said the town "morally owes that man the money" because he went beyond the normal call of duty and did something to help the town and his students.

Zbieg missed the reimbursement by only two votes when the first tally showed 169 in favor and 59 opposed with 171 needed for passage.

Following a 182-66 vote to reconsider the article, Paul Sullivan reopened discussion by saying the no vote sends a message that teachers "should not go that extra step." Saying the town should stand behind an employee who freely gave of himself to better accomplish his task, Sullivan said, "this person did nothing wrong but do his job a little better than he was supposed to."

Kelley, however, said, "A lot of people do a good job for the town and lose things working for the town."

School Committeeman Jim Sullivan once again supported the measure and assured voters that if the item were a "coat or a radio," then "the school committee would not take this position."

It is interesting to note that within five minutes after the trio of votes some 125 people left the hall, even though there were still some 11 more warrant articles to act on.

Prayer To The Holy Spirit

Oh Holy Spirit, thou who are all knowing, who brightens every path that I may reach my idea, thou who giveth me this divine gift of forgiving and forgetting wrongs done unto me and who in every instant of my life art with me. I'd like in this short dialogue to affirm my gratitude for all your blessings and reaffirm once again that I never want to part from thee though the illusion of material things abound.

My desire is to be with thee and all my loved ones in perpetual grace. Thank you for your mercy on me and mine. (Person should pray 3 consecutive days without revealing petition. Within three days grace will be attained regardless of how difficult the petition may be.)

Publish this prayer, once grace attained.
Grateful for Grace attained.

Route 129 - the road that was never rebuilt

It was about 20 years ago that the Wilmington Planning Board received $30,000, $3,000 each from 10 industrial firms of Wilmington, for the purpose of preparing a comprehensive general plan for Wilmington. No strings were attached. The planning board was to do what it believed to be best for the town, in a planning study.

Professor Charles W. Eliot, retired Harvard planner, was hired. He was (if memory serves correctly) the grandson of the man who originated the "five foot shelf of books," while he was president of Harvard University.

A kindly person, Eliot worked for several years on a study of Wilmington. This is not to review his work, but it is to speak of his study for an alternate to Route 129, through Wilmington, in what is known as Wilmington Square.

Essentially Eliot took up where previous proposals had left off. He planned a bypass, which received the name of Route 129 Bypass. It followed closely the work of A. Chandler Manning, a landscape architect, in 1914, and the Griffith plan of 1930. Both were Manning and Griffith were Wilmington residents.

Eliot proposed a new bridge, over the Boston & Maine to add to his new bypass, eliminating the troublesome over-pass at Shawheen Avenue.

It was while Eliot was in this phase of his work that Rep. Fred F. Cain paid a visit to the planning board one evening. Cain took up the task, with vigor.

Cain succeeded in getting the Mass DPW to build a new Route 129 bridge over the B & M, now called the Cain Bridge. He planned with Eliot for a street to meet this bridge, which would by-pass the Wilmington Center area. Cain got DPW engineers to prepare plans, and he raised half a million dollars to construct a new highway from near his garage to the new bridge now named after him.

The planned highway became, in the then current vernacular, the Cain Highway. It was a forward looking plan. It did not displace many homes and/or businesses. It would be a tremendous improvement over existing highways. There was nothing for people to get mad about.

Cain had raised the money for construction. It would be, he told friends, only a few weeks, maybe a month or two, until there would be a call for bids for construction of the highway.

That was about the time that the United States Congress passed legislation for the protection of the environment. The Cain Highway has been planned to go over some local wetlands. That, to Cain, was some "red tape" to clear up.

The road was never constructed. Fred Cain died in 1977, still believing that Wilmington would, one day, get a Route 129 bypass.

To make a long story short, there were other proposals. It became apparent that wetlands were preventing the Cain Highway from being constructed. The studies went on for several years. Each study became more complicated.

Fred Cain endorsed what he called the Early Start Option, in an effort to get the highway started. Scheme "C," which he favored, was presented to the selectmen in December 1976, and planned to use Kirk Street to get around Wilmington Square. It would eliminate many buildings. The selectmen endorsed it, with Miceli complaining of the "mass of concrete" the idea would need. Cain hoped to get the "early start": through, in three years.

Christian Bachman, chairman of the finance committee, and an engineer, became a volunteer in the studies that were going on. He and others laid out a total of 17 possible alternate routes. Each was evaluated by the planning board and then discarded.

The state appointed some engineers. Those men raised the number to 30, for alternate routes. One was to join Route 93 near the Park Street bridge in North Wilmington, another to join 93 southerly of the West Street bridge in the southern part of town. No possible route was left unexplored.

But each route went through a different neighborhood. In each case there were homeowners who did not like the idea. More and more residents became aroused.

In the latter part of 1977 the League of Women Voters tried to get people to agree to a "unified position."

In early 1978 Madelyn McKie of the planning board sought and received permission from other board members to form a group of persons to see what should be done about the Route 129 Bypass.

A few months later the new State Representative, Jim Miceli, assured the Chamber of Commerce that "relief was coming" for the Route 129 problem. On May 10 the Chamber of Commerce voted to support the Cain Highway plan.

On May 23, 1978 several of the groups of residents attended a selectmen's meeting to present "no build" arguments against the proposals being studied. Many were in favor of Route 1 (the Cain Highway) and everyone against every other proposal. Bill Frey told the selectmen that the DPW engineers were "designing a howitzer to kill a mosquito." Jerry Tully of South Wilmington presented a petition with 400 names, all against.

That, in spite of later efforts, just about killed any alternate to Route 129. The state could do little about the Cain Highway, and the Chamber of Commerce and the residents of Wilmington had showed that they were not interested in routes that wandered all over the place.

The plan which was adopted was to rebuild Route 129 on its present route. The state broke this into segments, and eliminated the work in the center. This left two areas where the highway construction would take place, Wilmington Center and between Route 93 and Woburn Street.

On September 19 of this year the state DPW presented plans for a new Burlington Avenue bridge and a Route 129 alternate, to cost $3 to $5 million. The presentation was made to the Wilmington Redevelopment Authority, which by town vote has some powers to explore relocation along Route 129.

About 12 business buildings will be destroyed, as well as a couple of homes, in what may be the ultimate of Route 129 planning. The plan would have a drastic effect on Wilmington Center. "The Square", as it is called, would be wiped out.

Wilmington Center proposal

Wilmington Center would undergo radical changes, if the Mass. Dept. of Public Works goes ahead with this plan to rebuild Wilmington Center. The plan would displace at least a dozen businesses.

Tech superintendent says discipline no problem

The Shawsheen Tech School Committee is still pursuing "a workable solution" to handling discipline at the school, despite some assurance by Superintendent - Director Benjamin Wolk that discipline is "under pretty good control."

"Any generalizations," he told members at their meeting Tuesday night, "don't really paint a true picture." He added that, temporarily, he is handling discipline for the upper grades while an associate is helping out with ninth graders. This was one temporary solution he came up with when instructed to find one by committee members at a previous meeting.

Committeeman Kevin Sowyrda (Wilmington) pointed out that since the assistant superintendent's position was eliminated several years ago, there has been no one assigned to handle discipline problems, problems which seem to have reached the "critical" stage.

"Since I've been on the committee," he said after the meeting, "this has gone back and forth. I think a disciplinarian is the best idea, but as of now, there are no funds available."

Committee chairman John Miller seemed annoyed both at the length of time the problem has been unresolved and Wolk's temporary solution.

"It appears discipline is becoming more and more of a problem," he told his board, adding that "by the time we get this thing resolved, the kids are not going to know who's in charge." He went on to explain that his main concern with Wolk acting as disciplinarian was the amount of time it took away from his regular job as director of the school.

"I get involved because I get involved eventually," said Wolk, defending his position.

Kenneth Gabriel, representing the Shawsheen Teachers Association (STA), said hiring a disciplinarian was "the ultimate solution." He maintained that though discipline cases are being dealt with, it's an ongoing problem because of repeat offenders and the fact that students assigned to detention are not going. He called the situation "frustrating" to teachers and stabs at the problem ineffectual in that repeat offenders are not being seen by the same administrator.

Committeeman Richard Griffin (Tewksbury) suggested Wolk meet again with his administrative assistants and come up with a more workable recommendation, one which would take into account available resources.

Toward the end of the discussion, there was some talk of using money from the surplus account to cover the cost of hiring a disciplinarian or eliminating another position in the administration, thereby freeing up some money, but no action was taken on either possibility at this time.

letter to the editor

Dear Larz:

One of the events that was missed on the day of the hurricane was the coming to Wilmington of 20 officers of the U.S. Coast Guard as an honor guard and active pall bearers at my husband's (Rudy Carrasco) funeral.

Our Rep. Jim Miceli, who is always there when you need him and does so much for this town, requested their presence, and Hurricane Gloria or not, they were here.

Our veterans' organizations, who had helped so much were also on hand.

The organist from the Congregational Church in Wilmington had come out from Boston on the train to play for the service and found himself stranded because the trains weren't running. The Rev. Murdoch, who conducted the service, retrieved him at the station and took him home with his family until the storm was over.

The soloist, William Merrill, had come home from his vacation in Maine to sing a song Rudy had once requested.

Rudy loved this town and had worked so much for it in the past, especially during the Bicentennial Celebration and all the veterans' occasions, despite his health. He would have been very proud of everyone. Even a hurricane couldn't stop the caring people of Wilmington from paying their last respects to him.

Sincerely,
Jean Carrasco

Tewksbury health board gets fluoride funds, grants deep water test variances

Members of the Tewksbury Board of Health finished signing an agreement with the state which will start the program for fluoridation of water supplies in Tewksbury. The action came at a Monday, September 30 meeting.

By the agreement the board of health is to receive the sum of $3650 to pay for the installation of fluoridation equipment. In turn, the board of health agrees to fluoridate the water supply for the next two years at the rate of one part fluoride compound per million parts water.

Also at that meeting, the board got a letter from the town counsel advising that ground water testing, with respect to construction of buildings, should be done when the ground water is at its maximum level. The testing, the counsel advised, is not to be "arbitrary or capricious, or unreasonable." Variances, if granted, must be in accordance with the laws and must be reported to the Department of Environmental Quality Evaluation (DEQE) within 30 days.

With that in mind, the board granted variances to four potential home builders. Charles Sullivan was granted a variance for a lot at 56 Trull Road. Robert Carroll was granted a variance at 7 Wayside Avenue. Robert Pondelli was granted a variance for land off Bradford Road. David Thibodeau of Haverhill was granted a variance for Lot 63, Summer Street.

The variance granted to the Disabled American Veterans (DAV) about a month ago was confirmed on September 30 after a lot of discussion. Jerry Hand, Henry Shields, Tony Cuoco and Lou Madden were present for the DAV and Pine Street residents Barbara and Eddie Flanagan were in opposition. The confirmation came after the board was reminded that, a month ago, the variance was to be granted after one month if there had been no negative letters from the DEQE or the town counsel.

Mr. Flanagan mentioned to the board a pending law suit over zoning. The land on which the DAV building stands, he said, is zoned for residences. The town's zoning bylaws generally do not allow for the use of residential land for a fraternal organization.

However, the town's zoning board of appeals had granted a variance to those zoning laws which allowed the DAV to build their building in the residential zone.

Shown with the painting are Dr. Fred Rothbaum, Andrea Peters, Helen Handrahan of the Wilmington Council for the Arts, and Dr. Carol Golub, director of the WFCS. Peter DeGennaro won a flower arrangement in the same drawing.

Tewksbury nabs three during break into car

Three youths were arrested by Tewksbury police October 6 after they were allegedly caught breaking into a vehicle parked on Main Street. The arrest was made after a Main Street resident phoned police to report three youths were attempting to break into a vehicle on Main Street near the Suzuki Motorcycle dealership.

Arrested by Officer Paul Doherty and Officer George Hazel were: William J. Decarsky, 18, of 120 Pringle St., Tewksbury; Raymond

P. LaMarche, Jr., 17, of 61 Young St., Tewksbury; and James A. Blanchette, 17, of 550 Chelmsford St., Lowell. Blanchette and LaMarche were each charged with single counts of breaking and entering a motor vehicle, larceny from a motor vehicle, possession of burglarious tools and willful and malicious damage to property. Decarsky was charged with the single count of breaking and entering a motor vehicle.

The arrests were made at 12:50 a.m. on October 6, shortly after the officers responded to an 11:58 p.m. call on October 5 for a group of youths acting suspiciously at 2117 Main Street. The officers allegedly found the youths entering a vehicle there and made the arrests.

Reports also indicate that a citizens band radio and tires allegedly taken from the vehicle during the break were returned to the owner the following day.

25 years ago

The October 13, 1960 edition of the Town Crier of Wilmington noted:

The planning board approved of a golf course proposed for Chestnut Street.

Two real estate developments were given approval by the planning board - Alderwood Estates between Woburn and West Streets and an extension of Hathaway Acres.

Louie's Oil of Main Street was offering green stamps free with every $7.50 15 point cleaning and checking plus bonus coupon covering a free service call.

Paul Meads of Main Street was called to active duty in the Navy.

Dick Keough, WHS sophomore won the cross country race at Chelmsford last week, making him number one in the Lowell Suburban District.

Scuba divers were hovering around Jenks Bridge looking for a gun allegedly used in a holdup-slashing in a Robert Hall Store in Saugus.

The new (round) Boutwell Street School was pictured, scheduled to open next Monday cost about $400,000.

Brad Morse, Republican nominee for Congress to replace the late Edith Norse Rogers was to be the guest of Wilmington Republicans who planned an open house. Chairman of the planned event was Mary Murphy who would be assisted by Pat MacFeeley and Helen Reynolds.

Weinberg's Department Store was offering a plan by which shoppers could "lay away a gift a day" until Christmas.

Trucks must be removed from residential area

Trucks of over 6,000 pounds may not be parked in residential areas in Wilmington overnight. So Carole Redler of Lake Street learned in a Wilmington Board of Appeals case on October 8.

Mrs. Redler's husband drives a truck. He parks it overnight at their home on Lake Street. During the past few months there have been more than one, and neighbors have complained.

Carole told the board of appeals that the reason more than one truck was at the property was because her father-in-law had died, and there were several trucks on his property, in another community. The family had those trucks at the Lake Street residence while they were clearing up the problems having to do with disposal of her father-in-law's property. Yes, there were several trucks, one of which had to be parked on the street, and there was a bunch of tires.

The property, she pointed out, was well cared for, with a wide driveway. She was aware of other homes in Wilmington where trucks were parked overnight.

The neighbors, in their turn, spoke of the truck in the street, and of the problems of children on that street. There were three couples who participated.

Chairman Bruce MacDonald told Mrs. Redler that there were two bylaws which were applicable, and that the board would have no option but to rule against her. It is against the town bylaws to park more than one truck in a residential neighborhood, and that truck may not weigh over 6000 pounds.

Carole took it all very nicely. The neighbors walked out with an expressed wish that something could be done about the Lake Street bridge, over the railroad. There is too much noise, they said.

LaLeche League meets in Burlington

Successful breastfeeding often begins with a happy childbirth experience. Many options are open to parents today in the Family-Centered Maternity Care programs in hospitals. How will the arrival of your new baby affect your relationship as a couple or as a family? These topics will be explored next Tuesday, October 22 when the Burlington Group of La Leche League of Massachusetts will meet to discuss "Baby Arrives: The Family and the Breastfed Baby," at 8 p.m. at the home of Joan Ross, 9 Mooney Rd., Burlington. Women of Wilmington, Burlington and surrounding towns are invited to attend.

This meeting is the second in the current series of four monthly meetings open to nursing mothers and their babies, as well as pregnant and other interested women. The discussion is informal, with opportunity to ask questions and share experiences. The group maintains a lending library of books on breastfeeding, childbirth and child care. La Leche League may be called at any time for immediate help, encouragement, and practical suggestions regarding breastfeeding, or to obtain the manual, The Womanly Art of Breastfeeding.

For directions and further information, please call group leaders Nancy Sikes 272-8119, Linda Sullivan, 643-6477 or Lauri Brown, 657-7688.

Disquieting as it may be it is important to note that just because your car's exhaust system isn't noisy it does not mean that everything is OK. Chances are, in fact, that your car's exhaust system will suffer in silence for quite a while before it gets bad enough to get noisy enough to attract your attention. But all is not lost. For by replacing loose or missing clamps, rusted muffler or pipes, you can help avoid the exhaust system problems that leave you fuming.

Redmen
split

Tewksbury's Rich LeDuc leads the attack upfield in Merrimack Valley Conference soccer action. The Redmen split a pair of games recently to remain in the thick of the Small School race.

Disappointing loss, expected win for TMHS

A disappointing loss and an expected win gave the Tewksbury Varsity Soccer Squad its third consecutive one win, one loss week. The loss came to the Methuen Rangers, 2-0 and the win was over the young Haverhill Hillies squad, 7-0. The scheduled game between Tewksbury and Lowell was postponed and will be made up at a later date in October.

After a key game with Billerica, the Redmen play at Dracut Thursday in a 3:30 p.m. game; at Wilmington on Saturday morning at 10 (JV's at the Shawsheen School in Wilmington) and travel to Chelmsford on Tuesday.

Methuen 2-Tewksbury 0

The Redmen, battling the Rangers for first place in the Small School Division, hurt themselves in this game as they accidentally scored the first goal of the game off a corner kick for Methuen, and then again, inadvertently assisted on Methuen's second goal. Methuen's first goal came less than three minutes into the game when on a corner kick to the far post, a Tewksbury back shanked the ball into his own net while attempting to clear the ball. With only two minutes to go in the half another Tewksbury back, trying to clear the ball, kicked it off a Methuen forward's leg, allowing the forward to chip the ball over an attacking goalie Ricky Heartquist into the net.

The second half was all Tewksbury as for the last 20 minutes of the game, Redmen keeper Heartquist played 30 yards to midfield out of the net, as Tewksbury tried in vain to put the ball by hot Ranger Goalkeeper, to no avail.

Sophomore wing Tim Quinn and midfielder Jeff Stone, as well as freshmen midfielder Keith Krugh played well in a losing cause.

Tewksbury 7-Haverhill 0

Tewksbury started and played the entire first half with mostly underclassmen and managed a 3-0 lead. Sophomore midfielder Jeff Stone broke the ice 2:09 into the game receiving a pass from senior forward Keith Tower. Fullback, playing forward, Bobby Field scored the second goal on a center to-wing pass from junior forward Sam Dias. Ricky Heartquist, normally the Redmen starting goalkeeper, came in at the wing position and scored his first career goal as the senior tri-capt took a through pass from fellow senior tri-capt. Nario Simao. The second goal came at 27:06 of the third period at 28:55. The second half saw the normal starters play the first 10 minutes of the half. Junior Ed Sipowicz dribbled by three defenders to up the count to 4-0 at the eight minute mark of the second half, and senior tri-captain Marc Masone upped the count to 5 and 6-0 with goals at the 10 minute mark and the 30 minute mark. Marone's second goal being assisted by sophomore back Marc Paglia. Senior Joey Wester scored his first goal at the 31 minute point of the half, unassisted. Nick Grund recorded the shut-out victory for the Redmen.

Junior varsity

The Tewksbury Junior Varsity coached by Bob Manzi, raised their team record to three wins and two losses this past week as they shut out Methuen 8-0 and Haverhill 9-0. Tewksbury's record is misleading, as most of their opponents are composed of juniors and sophomores while the Redmen are primarily freshmen and sophomores. Versus Methuen sophomore leader Ronnie Perrin scored three goals and assisted on one other. Other goal scorers were freshmen Kyrie Stevens, Tommy Walsh and Stephen Picano along with sophomores Dave Bufano and Billy Martin. Assists were recorded by freshmen Jim Pollard, Tommy Walsh and Doug Fowler along with sophomores Joe Seeley and Roy Kintler.

Smith sparks Curry soccer

The early soccer season has been a very successful one for both the men's and women's teams at Curry College in Milton.

The women are currently undefeated at 5-0, while the men are 5-1 after their first victory ever over Tufts University.

Kevin Smith, a junior from Wilmington, has led the men's team offensively with four goals and two assists, for 10 points. Sophomore Mike Driscoll of Winchester is runner up with three goals and an assist. The Colonels have outscored their opponents, 15 to 7 and outshot them 85-59.

In addition to outscoring their opponents, 23-1, the Curry women booters have outshot them, 158-32.

The Colonels defeated the Jumbos in a cliff-hanger, 3-2 last week. Their other victories have come over Mahattanville, Eastern Nazarene, Nichols and Southern Vermont. The only loss was to Coast Guard.

In addition to their scoring ability, the women feature an outstanding defense. They have allowed just one goal in five contests, shutting out Babson (5-0), Wesleyan (4-0), Salve Regina (5-0) and Colby-Sawyer (6-0). The Manhattanville score was 4-1.

Leading the women offensively are sophomores Cecilia Bromandier (seven goals and seven assists for 21 points) of Abington and Shelley Pesta (8-4-20) of Meriden, Conn.

Freshman forward Kris Brady of Norwood is third in scoring (4-2-10). Both Pesta and Bromandier have "hat tricks", with the former scoring three goals against Wesleyan and the latter with three against Salve Regina.

Charge to the top

Renae Allaby and the Wilmington High School field hockey girls posted two more wins this past week to remain on top of the MVC Small School Division with a 9-0 slate.

Robinson, Crowley pace Bentley

Over the years, Bentley College has been quite successful on the field hockey field. Among the accomplishments have been two NCAA Division II tournament appearances (1981 and 1983 when the Falcons finished second in the nation), a third place finish in the 1979 AIAA Division II Championships and an undefeated season in 1977.

With her team now competing at the Division III level (the NCAA eliminated the Division II tournament last Fall due to a lack of teams), second-year coach Linda MacDonald is hopeful that the success will continue.

In her first season at the helm, MacDonald guided her team to a 7-4-2 record. The record is even more impressive when one considers that three of the losses were against Division I opponents, that the Falcons were playing without any hope of a post season national tournament and that MacDonald was not even hired until preseason drills were underway.

The prospects for the 1985 season appear bright. MacDonald has had a full year to install her system and 11 letter winners, including eight starters, return from last year's squad.

Although only two starters from the 1984 team were lost to graduation, MacDonald will still field a relatively young team this Fall. Senior sweeper Donna LaBlanc (Littleton), a co-captain, along with junior goalie Suzi Halpin (Middletown, N.J.) is the only senior on the roster.

There are five juniors, all of whom will probably be in the starting lineup. In addition to Halpin, they are back Tracy Mackey (Bow, N.H.), link Patty Flanagan (Marshfield) and forwards Sam McAuliff (Saco, Maine) and Trish Scannell (Shrewsbury).

Halpin has been outstanding in her first two collegiate seasons, posting a goals against average of 0.89 in 32 games. She owns an 18-10-4 record (eight of losses inflicted by Division I teams) and has 11 career shutouts (six shy of the Bentley record).

MacDonald should also reap the benefits of a strong recruiting year this Fall. Several freshmen could earn starting roles this season despite the large number of veterans. Among them are backs Jennifer Cox (Somerset, N.J.) and Janet Crowley (Wilmington), link Vicki Griffin (Danvers) and forward Kathy Robinson (Wilmington). Another newcomer who could contribute up front is sophomore Colleen Wall (Saugus).

Once again, Bentley will play a strong schedule, with the Division I opponents on the schedule being Lowell, Providence, Rhode Island, Holy Cross and Springfield.

Wildcat quarterback Chris Athanasia hands off to backfield mate Tony Cutone in Saturday's victory. Cutone had another superb game, rushing for 62 yards and scoring a pair of touchdowns.

The Wilmington defense smothered the Haverhill Hillies Saturday, limiting the home club to just 50 yards of total offense in 23 plays.

Local 4-H riders win performance trophy

The Royal Riders 4-H Club, which is made up of youth from various towns in the Wilmington-Tewksbury area, recently sent 12 members to the Middlesex County 4-H Fair Horse Show in Westford. This show is the culmination of a year's hard work by the youth, not only in the horse project, but in various other areas.

The members spent the weekend camping out at the fairgrounds with their horses and ponies under the watchful eyes of their leaders and chaperones, Julie Moronie, Ann Dion, Margaret Porter, Joanne Peary and Karen MacPherson and were accompanied by Samantha Duff and Garret DuPaul who are club members who volunteered to work at the fair for the three day weekend.

The Royal Riders came home with the Overall Performance Trophy, which is awarded to the club whose members have the highest average point accumulation (total points accumulated in performance classes divided by the number of club members entered in the horse show) and the Gail McAlpine Perpetual Challenge Trophy, which is awarded for safety, observation of rules, sportsmanship, behavior and horsemanship (50 percent) cleanliness and organization of the stable area (40 percent), and stable area decorations (10 percent). Also received was the Club Team Challenge Trophy for ponies and a third place ribbon in Club Team Competition for horses. Local riders who contributed to the prestigious awards were the following:

Kristi Dion of Wilmington and her pony Starburst received first place trophies in Junior Western Equitation and Junior Pole Bending, second place ribbons in Junior Pickup and Deliver, Junior Flag Race, Junior Western Appearance and Pony Western Pleasure and third place ribbons in Junior Pony Express and Junior Pony Egg and Spoon. They also were awarded a fourth place ribbon in Junior Speed Action and Control, a fifth place ribbon in Junior Western Handiness and a sixth place ribbon in Junior Western Command.

Kristi also received a first place for her photograph of architecture (a water slide) and a second place in the category of landscapes (a sunset). Kristi is 11 and is in the seventh grade at the North Intermediate School.

Linehan - B.U.'s star goalie

The Boston University field hockey team is continuing its trek toward national prominence in 1985. In the midst of the finest start of the program's short history, the Terriers are now 5-1-1 and ranked 16th in the country. Those are masterful achievements for a squad that managed just two victories four seasons ago.

At the helm since the sport's upgrading to varsity level has been coach and catalyst Sally Starr. "It is much more satisfying coaching a team since its inception and making it a winner rather than coming into an established program," said coach Starr.

A key reason for the great strides achieved in such a short period of time has been the motivation of a team first attitude by Starr. "We do not have one standout player who makes or breaks us. Everything we accomplish, we accomplish through a team effort."

All's quiet on the defensive front, and junior goalie Mary Linehan of Wilmington is duly to blame for that. The miserly Linehan, owner of a 5-1-1 record has blanked the opposition four times and shared in a fifth shutout with team mate Pam Mudway. The defense has made things relatively easy for their goalie. Her highest save total is seven (in a 2-2 tie with Boston College), while her goals against average stands at 0.92. All this while battling painful hip injuries. Linehan set a school mark last year by recording six shutouts.

"Mary made some very strong saves in the Brown and Syracuse games," Starr said. "She is an outstanding communicator with the defense."

Majoring in communications, Linehan is the daughter of Jeff and Anne Linehan of Dadant Drive.

Singer, song writer, producer and agent on Dragon Court

Count holds court in Woburn

By EUGENE A. SYLVESTER

WOBURN — Sitting between his piano and his photocopier, he looks like the type of person who just might build a rock 'n roll empire in the middle of Woburn.

He, of course, is the Count. Count Viglione. Holding forth from his corporate headquarters on Dragon Court. Where, for the past ten years (one-third the actual life-span of rock 'n roll), he has actually been a singer, musician, songwriter, record producer, manager, booking agent and even the owner of his own record label.

Oddly enough, in the bizarre world of Boston rock 'n roll, the name Joe Viglione has actually managed to make itself as well-known as that of Peter Wolf, Joe Perry or Charles Laquidara.

Part of the fame, Viglione confirmed, comes from the fact that he has been producing the Boston Rock 'n Roll Anthology series since 1983; and before that, the Boston Bootleg series in 1979 and 1981.

Now, in 1985, Viglione's record company, Varuluen (which in Norwegian means "werewolf") has issued Volume Six of a series which he says "should go on forever." In fact, "Volume Seven is at the presses now, and Volume Eight will be ready to go to the presses in two or three weeks."

Featuring unknown local bands, the Anthology albums "have a wealth of talent to draw from." Viglione strongly maintains. And that, he says, is because the "Boston rock 'n roll scene is very unique. There are people everywhere in the area with tremendous talent, and this is a way to let the general public know about it."

Testifying to the longevity and the popularity of the Bootleg/Anthology series is the value placed by record collectors on "our very first record. If you can find a copy, you'd have to pay $25."

As for his own musical career, Viglione can claim to having started in the second grade "when I began playing the accordion." From that non-rock 'n roll instrument (if you overlook the fact that Bill Haley and his Comets often used one on occasion), he then went on to the guitar, and finally, the piano.

Viglione actually "thinks of myself as a pianist rather than a guitarist. I actually know more about keyboards than I do the guitar, and that's what I've been playing in my own band."

Now, though, concentrating mostly on vocals, Viglione has gone so far as to change the name of his own group this year from The Count to the more "marketable" Dimension Ten. "I just thought it was time to make the change," he explained, "and I think my music is changing as well as the name of the group."

To emphasize what "makes me unique," Viglione has just recorded his first album under the name Dimension Ten, and the album contains a total of eight versions of the title track, "Lost Inside The Midnight Sun." As he puts it, "If you're not humming it by the end of the album, you really haven't been listening very closely."

Viglione knows that "no one else has ever done anything quite like that before, but I really thought the song deserved that type of treatment." Also, this is the second album

Offbeat tidbits of Americana

FM TALK: Our far-flung correspondent is on special assignment this week. Till he returns, here is yet one more edition of those offbeat tidbits on American history:

A couple of interesting ironies from the twenties: the September 1929 issue of Ladies Home Journal contained an article by the vice-chairman of General Motors entitled "Everybody Ought to Be Rich." Just one month later came the worst crash in stock market history. Two months after the Great Crash a movie called "Chasing Rainbows" premiered. It was immediately scorned by critics and moviegoers alike because of its Utopian-like theme. One memorable song came from the film, however. "Happy Days Are Here, Again," which the Democratic Party adopted as its theme song.

Investors in the stock market have always had superstitions about when and when not to invest their money, but during the 1930's, Bernard E. Smith had one of the most unusual superstitions of all. Whenever Herbert Hoover made an optimistic comment about the market's recovery, Smith would not invest his money, believing the market would decline. Interestingly enough, his superstition worked, because he ended up making a fortune following his rule of thumb.

Eleanor Roosevelt did not smoke, but because she was so in favor of women being accepted in public as smokers, she frequently smoked at White House dinner parties to make her point that she wanted to help women.

One woman who certainly doing her part to liberate women during the 1930's was Mae West. The conservative Hearst newspaper chain didn't think highly of Miss West's activities, however, and banned her name from their papers.

In 1936, male students at Princeton University formed an organization called Veterans of Future Wars, which had the main objective of demanding the government give every male citizen between the ages of eighteen and thirty-six a check of $1,000 each. The purpose of this was to show every future soldier that dying in a war would not cheat him out of an extra paycheck, since Congress had been persuaded by the Veterans of Foreign Wars to give a bonus to the veterans of World War I. Although nothing ever became of their objective, the organization caught on, and within a short time more than 120 branches were established at colleges around the country.

In 1939, FDR ordered that Thanksgiving be celebrated one week earlier in order to give businessmen a longer Christmas season.

In 1940, Wendell Wilkie's slogan was "Roosevelt for ex-President."

Some little known facts about Herbert Hoover: Hoover opposed elitist fraternities while a student at Stanford University so much that he formed his own group, called the Barbarians.

Hoover was the first president to have a telephone on his desk at the White House. Previous presidents had the phone in an adjoining room.

Controlling the price of dying

Part one of a two part series

By JIM ROUILLARD

"Oh when I die, don't bury me at all,
Place my bones in alcohol
And at my feet place a white snow dove
To tell the world that I died for love."

Appalachian Ballad

"Nothing is not acceptable, not even death . . . So if I do think well of my life, for the same reason I must think well of my death."

Chuang Tzu

" . . . in this world nothing is certain but death and taxes."

Benjamin Franklin

Along with Ben Franklin's famous pronouncement on the two certainties of this life, comes the incontestable certainty, especially in the Boston area, of the high cost of living.

But, for many, a more troubling fear is that departure from this life has to cost considerably more than arrival.

An elderly widow in Woburn is forced to borrow, to bury her husband at an unexpected cost of $4,000. A young couple in Wakefield is stunned with grief

THE HIGH COST OF DYING doesn't have to be so high, according to Stoneham funeral director John Anderson — but tends generally to reflect what the consumer himself wants, as well as to the traditions that appeal to a majority of New Englanders.

at the sudden death of their child — and the size of the subsequent undertaker's bill. And a middle-aged Burlington man is devastated, not only at the loss of his wife and mother of his children — but at the staggering cost it takes to bury her.

The price of funeral caskets is $65 and up, with considerable stress on UP — according to a local funeral home's standard price list, effective Nov. 1, 1984, but subject to change without notice — for it does indeed go up, to a ceiling of $4,000-plus for the casket alone.

Results of a Federal Trade Commission survey for an earlier year, 1983 — from 117 members of the Massachusetts Funeral Directors' Association (MFDA) who responded to a questionnaire — showed mean prices for caskets offered ranging from $336 to $3,294. And the casket price is only

When asked by Selectman Jim Stewart to project a timetable for the case, Keegan replied that it was "impossible for me to predict."

The DPU had opened hearings on the matter in July, but the hearing officer assigned to the case subsequently became ill, and has not been able to return to work.

Back care expert to speak at Wellness Center

On Saturday, October 26, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., a workshop will be given by Vincent Gatto, a registered physical therapist, at the Wellness Center, 299 Main St., Wilmington.

Mr. Gatto received his master's degree in physical therapy from Columbia University. His clinical experience has been at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston and the New England Rehabilitation Hospital in Woburn. As a member of Back Care Associates of Wilmington, he is involved in the prevention and treatment of industrial back injuries.

The problem of back injury is well known, it is believed to disable eight of every 10 people to some extent during their lifetime. Presently the annual cost of all back injuries in the U.S. is over $5 billion. This brings the average cost of an injury to $6,000.

The October 26 workshop is geared for healthy individuals who seek information on the basics of how the back works and how to keep it healthy. Practical guidelines will also be available to those who have experienced recurrent back aches by reviewing proper lifting techniques, resting postures and assessing the influence of variety of life-style stresses which could lead to a back injury. Emphasis will also be given to the importance of general fitness and specific types of exercises. Those with a more serious history of back disorders are advised to consult with their physician before registering.

The format will be slide presentation, discussion and practice of "body mechanics" and exercises. Preregistration is required for all participants by calling the Wellness Center at 658-3638.

'State of the Heart' concert at Abundant Life School

"State of the Heart" is more than just a catchy album title. For the David Choate Group (DCG) it is an expression of their all-out commitment to excellence in all they do.

The term, state-of-the-art has been coined to describe something that's in step with the most advanced form of technology available to be employed - a step ahead of current trends - something both new and energizing. The David Choate Group, a five-member band from Boston, is just that. Considered to be a step ahead of the contemporary Christian music scene, the musical excellence and searing vocals of DCG has made them one of the hottest, in-demand bands from the East.

DCG's latest album "State of the Heart" is innovative and fresh - packed with energy. It is now receiving airplay on many of the radio stations across the United States with a contemporary Christian rock format.

DCG is currently on their "State of the Heart" tour and have scheduled a special concert appearance for Wilmington on October 18, at the Abundant Life Christian School, 17 Boutwell St., at 7 p.m. Tickets are $4.00 in advance or $5.00 at the door. Advance tickets are available at Rainbow Christian Book Store, Wilmington and Christian Book and Supply, Burlington, or by calling 657-8710.

Wilmington senior topics*October social

Signing up for the October Therapeutic Social will be closing out on Wednesday, October 16. After that date if you have not signed up, your name will have to be placed on a waiting list. The social will be the Council on Aging's annual Halloween dinner dance. The meal of chicken pie with all the trimmings will be served at 7 p.m. Music for the evening will be provided by Jim Blute. A $3.00 non-refundable deposit will be required to help defray the cost of the evening.

Fuel assistance

The Fuel Assistance Program this year will start on Wednesday, October 16. Applications to receive help in paying fuel bills will be made out at the Center on Wednesdays only. Shut-ins should call the center for a home visit, 657-7595 or 658-2258. To qualify for assistance it is necessary to meet the federal and state guidelines.

The figures have not as yet been set for this year. Those who qualified last year will probably qualify this year. Proof of income has to be submitted with the application. That is, all persons included in a household requesting assistance must present a copy of all income checks, Social Security, S.S.I. pensions, employment and interest over $100 from bank accounts, bonds or stocks. Those who qualify for the program will pay unpaid bills for fuel delivered only after October 1st, not before. Call for an appointment.

Buzzell Center shaping up

The Buzzell Senior Center is shaping up beautifully. With help once again from Rep. Jim Miceli we should have the outside of the building painted very soon. Before we can paint many damaged clapboards had to be changed. For this job several of our carpenters were called on - Joe Leverone, Bill Belbin, Ray Miner, Leslie Hanson and Frank Ratto. They did a nice job, thanks from all.

Raffle tickets available

The Renovation Committee has tickets available on the last raffle they will hold on the Buzzell renovation. The raffle is on 30 articles which are on display at the Senior Center for $1.00 a chance. The committee will draw winners of these articles at the Council on Aging meeting December 2. The majority of the items are for children. Many Cabbage Patch Dolls including a premie are among the prizes. Tickets can be purchased at the Center from committee members.

Letters to Senators

Letters are available at the Center addressed to Senators Kennedy and Kerry and Congressman Markey, stating our objections to the latest devastating changes in the Medicare Program. That is, the D.R.G. System, or a flat fee to hospitals and doctors for services rendered. Who will decide what the flat fee or treatment Medicare will cover? A Peer Review Organization (PRO) a group of physicians. They will decide what services Medicare will cover and whether your services will be in a hospital or an outpatient setting. As most private insurances base their coverage on what Medicare allows, the PRO's will effect what they will pay. Our political representatives will not know we object unless we let them know it.

ELECTRICITY SHORT CIRCUITED -*WATER SUPPLY KEEPS FLOWING

Hurricane Gloria caused disruption and inconvenience to many residents of Wilmington; power outages were common. The Wilmington Water Department also lost power at its pumping stations and the Butters Row water treatment plant. However, our backup diesel and propane gas generators were put into service and allowed us to supply water without disruption.

Our auxiliary power supply permitted us to produce sufficient water to meet the town's needs. The town's firefighting capabilities were, therefore, not adversely affected by Gloria. Although this power outage was for a relatively short time, we are capable of supplying water under emergency conditions for a much longer duration than experienced last week.

Our new water treatment plant in North Wilmington will also have a standby generator to meet emergency situations. During a power outage, it too will automatically convert to auxiliary power.

The Wilmington Water Department is proud of its capability to meet its commitment of supplying the town with water under all conditions. We appreciate the support of our water users at past town meetings as we sought funds to upgrade our system and look for their continued support in the future.

Hoover, while working as an engineer, translated a sixteenth century Latin work on mining.

You see a lot of tv programs about bloopers these days. Well, Hoover was once the subject of a major radio blooper himself. NBC's Harry Von Zell introduced Hoover as "The President of the United States, Hoobert Heever."

Hoover never liked having his White House servants present. Whenever he and the first lady appeared, the servants were required to go into another room.

In 1928 a reporter coined the Republican slogan "A chicken in every pot and two cars in every garage." Five years later the author of the slogan was out of a job and forced to beg just to feed himself and his family.

In 1932, Mickey Mouse was banned. That's right, the Mickey Mouse. Mickey was banned because he appeared in a cartoon with a cow that was holding a book entitled "Three Weeks," by Elinor Glyn. The book, which was about an Englishman's affair with a Russian queen, had already been banned in Boston twenty-four years earlier.

While president, FDR always slept with a gun under his pillow. Eleanor also felt the need to protect herself, and carried a pistol in both her pocket-book and the glove compartment of their car. Roosevelt had another quirk: he had an inordinate fear of fire. Because he was confined to a wheelchair, he refused to be alone in a room with a fire burning in the fireplace.

One of Roosevelt's most embarrassing moments came when the wife of a foreign diplomat lost her underwear just as she was about to shake his hand at a White House dinner.

In 1931, Henry Ford said, "These really are good times, but only a few know it." Make it a good week.

savings on the purchase of any hearing aid.

Dear Friend,

DO YOU HEAR... BUT DON'T UNDERSTAND?

DO PEOPLE SEEM TO MUMBLE?...DO WORDS RUN TOGETHER?...DO YOU HAVE TROUBLE HEARING THE TV?...HEARING IN CROWDS?...CHURCH?...OR FAMILY GATHERINGS?

If you can answer Yes to any of the above questions, then you may be one of 20 million Americans who suffer from some form of hearing impairment.

The most common type of hearing loss is "Nerve Deafness." It is usually a gradual process. It slips away so slowly that you are not aware your hearing is fading until it reaches a point impossible for you or your family to ignore...The world of sound around you is gradually being closed off. Now, at last, there is hope...most hearing problems can be helped!

New Help for Nerve Deafness

Hundreds of thousands of people who suffer from Nerve Deafness (sensori-neural hearing loss) are successfully wearing In-The-Ear hearing aids. These tiny custom-made electronic instruments are comfortable to wear, inconspicuous (they fit in your ear), and most important, they can help people Understand more clearly.

Remember that hearing loss is a family affair. So, be sure to bring a friend or relative, someone whose voice is familiar to you. A hearing problem itself is more conspicuous than a hearing aid. If you've been told in the past that you couldn't be helped, you owe it to yourself and your loved ones to come in and check again.

The Count holds court

that has featured that particular number.

Last year, recording for a Paris label, Viglione included the song on his album, "The Intuition Element." That album, of course, was produced by the legendary Jimmy Miller who in years past worked with The Rolling Stones on such classics as "Jumpin' Jack Flash," "Gimme Shelter," "You Can't Always Get What You Want," "Street Fighting Man," and many others.

All in all, he noted, he has been a member of "one group or another since 1971." And, he has always done "my own material. In fact, in the Boston area, you really have to be original if you want to stay around for any length of time. Doing Top 40 stuff doesn't get you very far in Boston clubs."

In the course of "building my own career," Viglione has likewise worked with "countless groups and performers. I produce their records, get them club dates and work with them on building a following. In other words, I manage every aspect of their career the same way I do my own."

Consequently, there is enough time in any one day. And, sitting in his kitchen, he spends endless hours on the phone talking to "anyone and everyone in the industry." From there, it's onto clubs like The Paradise, The Channel, and Jumbo's where he books "their acts" on a nightly and weekly basis.

"It's a crazy business," Viglione admits, "but it's something that I've been serious about since I was seventeen. I can't imagine myself doing anything else."

And all because, "music is the one way I have to express myself. I can say the things I want to in my lyrics, and even when I'm involved in the business end, it's still just an extension of the music itself. Booking a good group at The Paradise for instance is just as satisfying to me as writing a really good song."

Just back from New York

City where he attended a major record convention, he is now preparing "to go into the studio with a group I just started managing, ready to start distributing Volume Six of the Anthology series and thinking about starting a new production company with Jimmy Miller when he comes over from England (later this month)."

Obviously, Viglione would like to "go national." After all, being a celebrity in the Boston area has its moments, "but I'm ready now to go on a national tour and have one of my records picked up by a major label."

Ironically, he says, his records "do better in Europe than they do here." But, all that, he feels, is changing "very soon." And all because "I've been living the type of life I wanted to." Besides, "I've been at it so long, I've naturally gotten better over the years."

As for what will happen tomorrow, Viglione has to postpone "thinking about it right this minute" because he's on the phone with one person (from New York) and there's another one on hold from Europe. "It's like this every day, from morning till midnight. There's never a minute to spare."

And while "it's only rock 'n' roll," that's the way "I like it."

Cost of dying

the beginning.

Add to that other traditional burial costs: embalming, body restoration, special cosmetology, hair design, use of visitation rooms and funeral home chapel, shelter of remains, hearse limousine and flower car rental, burial clothing, published obituaries, honoraria for clergy and musicians, flowers, gravesite, monument and taxes — and the total cost can indeed be staggering.

But it doesn't have to be so, according to Stoneham undertaker John Anderson.

The high cost of American dying, celebrated both in satire and carefully researched study, from Evelyn Waugh's irreverent spoof "The Loved One," to Jessica Mitford's "The American Way of Death," is in some ways the result of undertakers' methods, but in some ways the product of our own personal and cultural attitudes, Anderson maintains.

Mitford hit the American funeral industry with a lighted bomb, in 1963, with publication of her book.

From the publisher's jacket: "Here is the whole complex of commercial operations that results in funerals whose expense, display and mumbo jumbo are unrelated to any Christian or Jewish tradition and virtually unheard of in any other country today. And here is precise information on what is being done to lower the cost and raise the dignity of burial in the United States."

What is being done? "The American Way of Death" was published more than two decades ago. Have things changed?

Anderson, a lifelong Stoneham resident, with 20 years experience in his field, had concluded his undergraduate studies at Connecticut's University of Bridgeport, and begun preparation for his career in the funeral industry, with further study at the New England Institute in Boston, when "The American Way of Death" hit the bookstands.

"When that book came out," he said, "The whole industry was panicking — but I felt that, instead of looking at themselves, and thinking about whether the author had any good ideas or raised any good points, the industry geared up to fight the findings of the book."

It's only in fairly recent years, he added, that the funeral industry has perceived an increased demand for alternative funeral arrangements, begun to address some of the questions raised by "The American Way of Death," and come to provide alternative forms of funeral arrangements, which generally means cremation.

By the year 1995, according to projections by the Cremation Association of North America (CANA), cremation will account for 20 percent of all funeral business and, by 2000 A.D., CANA estimates, 23.5 percent of New Englanders will opt for cremation.

Yet much of the local industry's offerings and attitudes are clear reflections of what the local consumer wants, Anderson said. In the Cambridge area, for example, he gauges that an approximate 50 percent of the people choose alternative funeral arrangements, but in the North Shore area, including Stoneham and her sister communities of Burlington, Lynnfield, Reading, North Reading, Tewksbury, Wakefield, Wilmington, Winchester and Woburn, 90 to 95 percent choose traditional, more expensive funerals.

The explanation for this is based on a variety of factors, including religious and educational demographics, income level, traditional versus alternative outlooks, the "middle-aging" of American society, the widening of the income gap, and changes in the origins of immigrants, according to industry research.

"Up until recently, the Catholic church opposed cremation," Anderson said, and a very sizable proportion of the people in these 10 local communities is Roman Catholic. New England tends, as well, he added, to be conservative in general — and an area like Cambridge, with its larger proportion of academicians and professionals, is demonstrably more likely to move to alternative — and less expensive — funerals.

Anderson said the wealthy tend to pay the least for funeral arrangements.

Attitudes towards funerals are peculiar and varying, he said. "Sometimes I think some people view funerals like weddings; they want to brag about what they spent."

Moreover, in Anderson's experience, some families even vie with each other, almost making a contest out of public and visible expressions of grief for the departed, which he feels may reflect guilt about how they've behaved during the person's lifetime. He has seen siblings compete to provide the most elaborate casket spray, for example, though only one can be used, and even witnessed a family fistfight in his funeral home.

A sensitive, reflective man, who provides detailed and thoughtful answers to interview questions, Anderson said he is clearly pained when he sees a family disintegrate into warring units at the death of a family member, and he has seen both the drawing apart and the drawing together of various grieving families.

"What I like to see best," he said, "is a pulling-together of the family and a funeral where the clergy — or the person who is officiating — sits down with the family and with us and really thinks out a meaningful service, perhaps with poetry and music, but one which states something appropriate about the person who has died."

"I had one funeral, of an artist, without the body present (she had chosen direct cremation) in which we put her artwork on display, with her favorite painting in place of where the casket would be. It took time, and thought, to arrange this, but you'll find there are more and more funeral directors who are willing to offer alternative means."

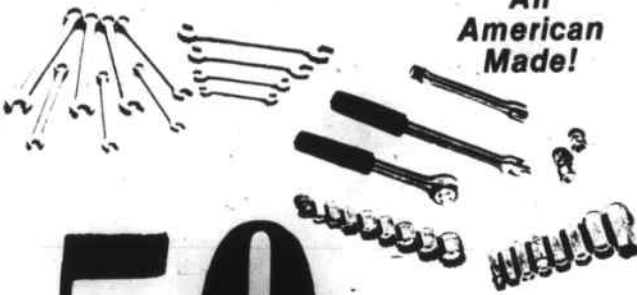

"I really think the cost depends on what the consumer wants. It's overstated that the cost of a funeral has to be high, and I feel that, especially with intelligent and thoughtful pre-planning, the cost can be controlled."

MOVIE REVIEWS Rochelle Flynn

Charles Grodin

Behind his baby face and gentle smile, Charles Grodin is a talented, hard-working actor/writer/director who is slowly cornering the comedy market.

According to "Halliwell's Filmgoer's Companion," Grodin is 50 years old, although he refuses to disclose his age. However, one time span he readily discussed during a recent telephone conversation was what he has been doing for the past seven years of his life. Those years were tied up in a movie project that nearly withered in its earliest stages, as the subject was hardly endearing to the movie moguls on the West Coast.

That project, now the completed Movers and Shakers, was "very hard" to pull together, said Grodin. "It took seven years. Movies about Hollywood aren't considered to be commercial prospects. This will end up making money. But really only because we made it for $3.5 million and virtually everyone worked for scale. They don't like to make movies about Hollywood and a lot of people didn't want to make it because they felt that the movie industry was being attacked by the movie. I thought it was a tribute to the movie industry."

The film chronicles the efforts of a movie executive (played by Walter Matthau) who tries relentlessly, and seemingly vainly, to produce a great, memorable tribute to his recently deceased mentor.

"It's an attack in one sense, but the Matthau character is an admirable character. But, I never intended it as an attack. I didn't realize that when you write a comedy about something it ends up being an attack. If you write a comedy about the newspaper business, it ends up being an attack," Grodin stated.

It took a long time, and I got all these people and I made it at that money, and that's how we got it made. Now that it's out — it opened in New York and Los Angeles — it is very successful. It ran two months in each of those cities, and then they held it because they didn't mean it to be a summer picture. It opened in May, they are starting to release it around the country in major cities."

Grodin expects the film to appeal to a select audience, which is one of the reasons it has not been released nationally to a mass market.

"It is more for people who like an Albert Brooks movie or a Woody Allen movie, or maybe the movie Being There, with Peter Sellers. All of which are drier, more sophisticated kinds of comedies. If you like that kind of thing, you might love this." He qualified his statement by adding, "If you don't like that kind of thing, you really shouldn't come see this, 'cause it absolutely won't be for you."

"I wanted to write and talk about how difficult it is to make something good, how difficult it is to make a marriage or relationship work, and the price you have to pay for it. Not just emotionally, but physically. That's why everybody gets sick in this movie. I see ironic humor in that, and a lot of people found that upsetting. It is upsetting. It's more upsetting to me now because my sense of humor is failing me a bit on the subject. Now I don't think I could write it," he said.

Grodin wrote, co-produced and starred in Movers and Shakers, but he said that he never realized while he was filming that it wasn't a mainstream type of film. "That is why I hope they put it into the proper kinds of theaters, to send that signal. But, in all the interviews, I'm letting people know that it is not a broad, slapstick kind of comedy and not a comedy that winks at you. It is really a movie for people who have generally stopped going to see movies."

As he talked about his film, Grodin never seemed surprised that the actors appearing in the film did so far less than the usual salary commanded by actors or actresses with recognizable names.

"The people are in it because they liked the parts, and money was secondary. I would be in a movie too if everybody was getting paid nothing. When you can't it's if everybody is getting paid and they want to pay you nothing. That's what you can't do. But, good adult comedies are hard to come by. The actors out here (Los Angeles) are more frustrated than anybody. There aren't a lot of good comedy movie roles for people who like to do something more sophisticated."

Because those good comedies are so few and far between, Grodin is asserting himself to ensure future projects meet his standards. "I like to control what I am in. Given what the choices are if I don't write it, I am leaning towards writing. I am writing the movie I am in now, too." That film is Club Sandwich, a comedy he is now filming on the island of Catalina.

Grodin's ambitions exceed mere screenplays however, as he also plans to write a book. "I did a one-man show, like an auto-biographical comic saga of my career. I did it in concert, and I'm going to do a book based on it."

Grodin claimed that it is inconsequential to him what medium he works in, as long as he is doing his best.

"It all depends on what the project is. You don't really care what it is if it's good. It is hard to find stuff that is good, so you go where that is. The movies are a 12-hour day. The theater is repetitious — there are drawbacks to both of them. Movies are a lot more money, but the grueling nature of the schedule, the hours you have to work, are very hard. There are pluses and minuses all around."

As long as it entertains people, whether I write it or act it, I don't care what it is," concluded the New York based actor.

THE CHILDREN'S MUSEUM

The Boston Children's Museum will open a new exhibit, The Climbing Sculpture, on Wednesday, November 6. Suspended between the second and fourth floors in the main stairwell of the Museum, the exhibit is especially designed for children ages five and older. This sculpture allows children to climb safely and comfortably on a series of free-form platforms set 14 inches apart and enclosed with wire mesh. Inspired by a similar exhibit at the Museum's old Jamaica Plain location, The Climbing Sculpture emphasizes large-scale exercise for children, unlike some other exhibits which demand more fine-tuned dexterity.

Tom Luckey, designer of the sculpture, graduated from Yale in 1966 with a degree in architecture. He began his career building furniture in Cambridge. Since then his work has, as he describes it, "developed from pieces which are functionally based to pieces which are more sculpturally based." His work has been published in such publications as Time and House and Garden. The Climbing Sculpture is a product of three years of collaboration with the Museum and is funded by private donations.

The Boston Children's Museum is on Boston's waterfront at Museum Wharf, 300 Congress Street, a short walk to Faneuil Hall Marketplace and accessible by public transportation. The Museum is open Tuesday-Sunday, 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. and Friday until 9 p.m.; closed Mondays except Boston school vacation days and holidays. For information about the scheduled events call the What's Up Line: (617) 426-8855.

DISPLACED HOMEMAKER TRAINING

The Division of Occupations of the Massachusetts Department of Education has awarded

Massachusetts Bay Community College's Institute for Business and Industry a grant to offer a 25 week Office Information Processing program at the college's Framingham Campus beginning in October.

Participants will learn typing, word processing and office skills and upon successful completion of the program, will receive up to 23 college credits and a certificate of achievement. The Displaced Homemakers Center of Greater Boston (Natick YMCa) will provide services in outreach counseling and placement assistance. Dr. James Wright, Division Chairman for Management and Business at the college, will coordinate the program.

The program is open to male and female unemployed adults who are displaced homemakers, 35 years of age or older, divorced, separated, widowed, married to a disabled spouse or on public assistance benefits and a resident of Massachusetts. The program will enroll up to twelve participants. Financial aid and child care services are available.

For further information contact the Office of Business and Industry at Massachusetts Bay Community College, 237-1100, ext. 190.

Austin Prep scholarships

Four area residents are among the students who have been awarded Austin Scholarships at Austin Preparatory School in Reading. David Alger of Stoneham, Daniel Mooers of Tewksbury, James Patti of Burlington, and Paul Tarantino of Wilmington will receive four-year scholarships, according to the announcement made by the Rev. Joseph F.X. Gillin, O.S.A., Headmaster of Austin Prep.

The academic scholarships are awarded each year to incoming members of the Freshman Class. They are awarded on the basis of performance on an entrance exam, and on grammar school grades and recommendations.

David Alger, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Alger of Fairview Road, Stoneham, is a graduate of Stoneham Junior High School, where he was a member of the National Junior Honor Society. He was also active in the Math Club and Art Club, and won awards for math competitions.

Daniel Mooers is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Mooers of Country Club Drive, Tewksbury. He is a member of the Massachusetts Chess Association and the United States Chess Federation. He is a leader in the Boy Scouts of America Troop No. 49.

AARP holds monthly meeting

'Boston by Foot' Oct. 11

The October meeting of the regional Melrose Chapter AARP No. 1124 Inc. will be held at the Melrose Highlands Congregational Church, 355 Franklin St., Melrose on Friday, Oct. 11 at 1:30 p.m. with Mrs. Signe Bickell of Reading, president presiding.

The Rev. Forrest Musser, Minister Emeritus of the Highlands Congregational Church, gave the invocation opening the September meeting. Ten new members were welcomed. Foster Ford, chairman of the Tours Committee, reminded the 175 members present about the two bus tours of Vermont foliage in the Mt. Snow area on Sept. 25 and 26, with departure time set at 7:45 a.m. and returning near 6:30 p.m. Following the business meeting, William Canaday, executive director of the Melrose Council on Aging, showed slides and talked of his English trip covering the Upper Thames and the Yorkshire area. Refreshments were served by Eleanor Spurr and her committee.

The Oct. 11 program planned is Boston by Foot. This is an "easy" armchair tour covering the four shapes of Boston, and the lecture with slides will trace the history of Boston's topography and architecture from 1630 to the present. Questions from the audience will be welcomed.

Melrose Chapter AARP No. 1124 Inc. is a regional chapter and includes Melrose, Lynnfield, Reading, Stoneham and Wakefield.

Meetings are held on the second Friday of each month, September through June, at the Melrose Highlands Congregational Church. If there is no school in Melrose, there will be no AARP meeting. New members and friends are always welcome. Call Helen Fazio, membership chairman, at 438-3473 for more information.

Bring back the good old days of Halloween

By ALEXANDRA EAMES
Consultant to PAAS
Halloween Make-up Kits

Each year as I watch neighborhood children masquerading as little ghosts and goblins. I am reminded of my own childhood memories of Halloween. A little bit of mischief and a lot of imagination were the elements that made this holiday so much fun for us kids...and, although I didn't realize it then, for the adults as well. Halloween was a time to escape into another world, into another character of my own making. I would become someone else with the help of make-up and a costume, trying my best to look truly frightening and malevolent, as I collected treats from the neighbors in exchange for my cries of "trick or treat!" For me, one of the best parts of Halloween was deciding what to be, choosing and creating the disguise that would fool the grown-ups and surpass the creative efforts of the other kids. I remember my friends and I used charcoal, flour, food coloring, and even our mothers' cosmetics to create our fiendish disguises. It's much easier now, with make-up kits available in stores. We loved thinking up unusual or humorous get-ups, or re-creating our favorite comic strip heroes.

Then we'd taste the spicy adventure of being allowed to stay out after dark - a half hour later than usual - without our parents! That was a Halloween tradition that I can still recall with a sense of childlike relish and excitement.

Unfortunately, many children don't enjoy that tradition today. There are other things besides the sight of young goblins at the door to concern parents at Halloween. Awareness about missing children increases. Halloween tricks are sometimes played on children rather than by them. In my childhood, the only thing I ever found buried in an apple was a silver quarter.

Some cautious parents I know won't even allow their children to take part in the tradition of trick or treating. But, thankfully, Halloween hasn't been allowed to die. According to research undertaken by my company for PAAS Halloween Make-Up, Halloween is still the third most celebrated holiday, and parents and children are making up their own traditions to enjoy the day - and night.

We often suggest that parents either take turns or join forces in hosting Halloween parties for neighborhood children. Last year one of my neighbors invited her son's friends to come without costumes. They brought old sheets and clothes; she supplied construction paper, crayons and make-up kits so children could costume themselves as part of the party festivities. Games included the old standby, apple bobbing, as well as a few new twists like "Pin the Hat on the Witch," and a new spin on charades in which children not only made-up as a character, but acted out the role. It was good to know that telling ghost stories in the dark was one of the party's highlights.

The spirit of the holiday has survived. And it has survived only because of the imagination - the often over-active imagination - of children. With a little help from us grown-ups, our children will be able to pass along some Halloween traditions of their own.

Museum Month

October is Museum-Goers-Month in metropolitan Boston and the Museum of Our National Heritage in Lexington is celebrating on Sunday, October 13, from 1-4 p.m. with free special programs that take visitors behind the scenes of its four current exhibitions.

Guest curators Terry and Eva Herndon of Carlisle and museum staff members will present a step-by-step slide show and commentary on how the current exhibit, In Search of Barney Oldfield: Auto Racing in America, was researched, the gallery constructed, racing cars moved in, paintings and art objects mounted, and special programs planned and executed.

Artist-in-residence Bill Meikle, who portrays Ben Franklin at the museum and in Massachusetts schools, will talk with visitors to the Franklin exhibit, Useful Knowledge and Public Good: Dr. Franklin Considered. In addition in the gallery, musician Very Meyer of Cambridge will play the glass armonica, an instrument that Franklin invented.

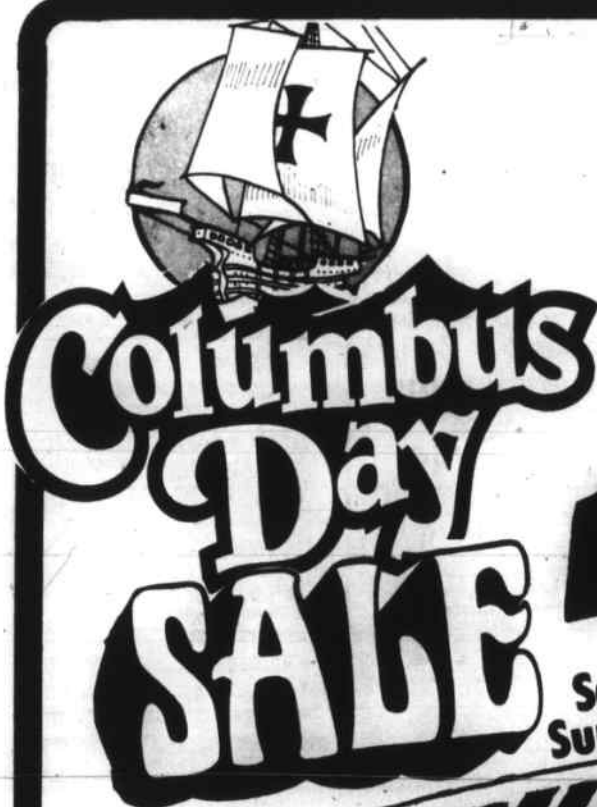

In the other two galleries, staff members will offer visitors a chance to "meet an object" in exhibitions Off the Walls: Historic Wallpapers in New England and Fraternally Yours: A Decade of Collecting. The latter exhibit highlights research on objects from the museum's unique collection on fraternal and secret societies. Off the Walls features more than 200 wallpapers from the extensive holdings of the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities, which cosponsors the exhibit.

Join the fun and see how a modern American history museum runs. The museum is open Columbus Day, too!

Museum hours are Monday-Saturday, 10 a.m. - 5 p.m.; Sunday, noon - 5 p.m.; Columbus Day hours are 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. Located at 33 Marrett Road (Route 2A), Lexington, the museum offers free admission and parking.

The museum store has stocked special holiday items, too, for fall visitors.

For more information, call the museum at 861-6559.

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

Last Sunday afternoon my Uncle John Shea said to his pal, Rowan Fitzgerald, "It's such a nice day, come with me, we'll visit some of my relatives." "Where are we going," Rowan asked, "to the Stone Zoo or to the Woodchipper's house?" Now Rowan, that wasn't a kind thing for you to say. I do admit, however, that I paid $50 to have my family tree looked up and it cost me over $500 to keep it quiet. I visited the Stone Zoo last summer and an attendant said to my wife Kathy, "Gee, thanks for bringing HIM back." I know that you are a retired carpenter Rowan, I also know that when you were learning the trade you said to the foreman, "I don't understand this, I cut this board twice and it's still short." Uncle John, you're no better yourself. When you were in the Air Force in WW II, the pilot complained that it was too cold in the cockpit and you tried to turn the helicopter blades off, nearly causing the plane to crash. You're welcome anytime gentlemen, but for crying out loud, please, bring your own peanuts!

Marie Procopio — thanks for this gem. "A halo doesn't have to slip very far before it becomes a NOOSE." Folks, the three rings of marriage are the engagement ring, the wedding ring and the "suffering." Ernest Sweeney is a retired starter for the MTA. Those were the days when the trains, trolleys and buses ran on time. Today most of the trouble for late schedules is that there is nobody, it seems, to wake up the starters! Believe it folks, I'm not trying to be funny, ask my friend Louis O'Malley who has retired from waiting and bought a car. The rocking chair was invented for "Whistler's Mother." She never, however, got the hang of it for she was always "off her rocker." It would be nice if when we feel good we notify our faces. In the late 1930's my cousin Peggy Walsh joined a cloistered order of nuns. They followed the rule of "strict observance" that included the vow of silence. Outside of the singing of hymns and reciting prayers only two spoken words were permitted every 10 years. In her first chance to speak, Peggy said "room cold." The complaint was duly noted and promptly forgotten. Ten long years later in a louder voice her words were "food bad." There wasn't any improvement either in the temperature of the room or the quality of the food. She patiently waited 10 more long, long years for the opportunity to shout, "I quit." "Good," responded the Mother Superior, "you have done nothing but complain anyway!"

Dennis Tully has a beautiful Irish tenor singing voice. He recently recorded a medley of songs on a 12 inch record. It's too bad that the engineer doesn't appreciate Dennis' singing like I do for he promptly, after playing it back, drilled a 14 inch hole right in the middle of it and stifled the career of another John McCormack. Sign in a tailor shop, "When we get through with your custom made suit you will have a 'fit.'" Sign on a combination diner and filling station, "Eat here and get gas!" Watch repair shop, "If your watch doesn't 'tick' to you, 'tock' to us."

Dan MacMaster of Lowell, his mother Mary and his sister Gail, are fans of this column. I thank them for the kind words they say about Woodchips. Dan told me that he walked into a doctor's office a few years ago and told the beautiful nurse, Jane Driscoll, that he had shingles. "Sit right down," she said, "the doctor will see you as soon as possible." After a thorough examination the doctor exclaimed, "I don't find anything wrong with you." "Thanks doctor," replied Dan, "but I do have shingles — a whole truck load of them — the men are coming tomorrow to repair your roof." One trouble with the world is that so many people who stand up vigorously for their "rights" fall down miserably on their "duties."

Although I always do my level best to have people enjoy Woodchips, nevertheless I do breaking, I shall not live in vain. If I can ease one life the aching — or cool one pain — or help one fainting Robin unto his nest again — I shall not live in vain." Folks, I could avoid criticism easily — by saying nothing, doing nothing, and being nothing. I prefer, however, to "TRY" to write a humorous column and let the "Woodchips" fall where they may. I thank Margie Lynn Stratton of North Reading for her lovely card sent from Cornell U. where she is hoping to get her PhD in Agriculture Chemistry. Her mother Eleanor and father Buddy Stratton send her a copy of the Middlesex Supplement every week.

My nephew Mark Aloisi brought home a note from his teacher that said, "Your son is 'behind' the rest of his class, he should have an encyclopedia to catch up." My brother John gave him his own note to return saying, "My son Mark can walk to school the way I did." I remember when I went to school and my teacher, Miss Collins, in geography class said, "Later today we will journey to Italy and visit the ancient ruins of Rome. I raised my hand and said, "Miss Collins, I don't think my mother will let me go, I have to go to the dentist this afternoon." In high school Miss Sullivan asked me, "Stand up and tell the class what you know about nitrates." "Oh," I exclaimed, "I know that they are cheaper than day-rates." "I know that you can describe a vacuum," she said, "you seem to have it in your head." I finally graduated with grades below "C level." I figured with that kind of a record I'd easily be accepted in the Naval Submarine Service. I was wrong, but I did work for a few years in a sandwich shop making, guess what? Submarine Sandwiches! A person can go wrong in many different directions, but "right" in only one! Do you believe in signs? Well you better in Madison, Indiana — a sign posted on a farm there said, "No trespassing, survivors will be prosecuted." Superintendent of Schools Robert Horan was a guest of the Wilmington Rotary Club on Sept. 18 when it was announced that Chris Athanasia and Ed Shelley are the current Junior Rotarians.

'Summer's Farewell'

The days and months have swiftly passed
And soon we'll feel the wintry blast
Where once the rows of corn did
grow
Nature will sow her crop of snow.

It's Nature's way to tell us all
To listen for her clarion call.
The time has come for us to know,

The Summer's gone, with all its glow.

Robins have come and said
goodbye,
At night I've seen the geese fly high.
A harvest moon looks down
below,
Guarding a trout stream's
gentle flow.

Have hope - for Summer will come again
For time like wheels will have no end.
Then geese and robins will say,
"Hello"
And corn and flowers again will grow.

Tips to career success

"Millions of Americans are unhappy in their jobs, yet fail to realize they can influence their career direction and chances for promotion," insists Jack Erdlen, Chairman of Costello, Erdlen & Company of Wellesley, Mass., and former Executive Director of Employee Management Association. "The one common trait shared by successful people is that they do not sit back and wait for good things to happen to them," he observes. "You can improve and control your career destiny if you take the time to work at it. Don't shy away seeking new responsibilities. It helps your boss know that you're a team player and want to do a good job."

For those who are discontent with their present positions, Erdlen offers the following suggestions to alleviate work frustrations:

- Identify likely positions of interest within your organization and determine the qualifications needed to obtain them.

- Obtain visibility with your employer by volunteering for special, yet unattractive, projects and taking company courses.

- Join and participate actively in local and/or national associations that cater to your areas of interest.

- Improve your communication skills. Take special courses, if necessary, to develop these faculties.

- Avoid clock watching and spend extra time before and after work hours in learning more about your job.

Erdlen's opinions are shared by Ed Miller, Manager of Executive Recruitment for the Standard Oil Company (Ohio). He recommends that you "Package yourself so that you're marketable inside the organization" and take the following actions:

- Identify the successful people in the company and emulate their behavior. Learn how they prepared themselves. If possible, try to obtain a mentor who will advise you on the best course of action.

- Research and understand how the promotion policy works. Become familiar with Management Development, Selection Planning, and Job Posting programs. Discuss your career with the personnel department.

- Sit down with your boss and find out what is expected of you and how your performance will be measured. Learn what is important to him or her.

- "You can't overemphasize the importance of creating and maintaining a positive impression on a personal and professional basis," states Jack Bramlage, Director of Executive Search for the Mead Corporation. He stresses the following factors:

- Perform every assigned task in a conscientious and expedient manner. Ask for a critique of your performance.

- Meet your deadlines and don't hesitate to seek out additional assignments and responsibilities.

- Pay attention to your dress and grooming and take the necessary steps to keep in good health.

- Get involved in a community service activity or a company charity project. Demonstrate your flexibility.

CHANGE JOBS IF NECESSARY

Each of these experts emphasize that importance of being a good listener and asking for advice whenever necessary. They are not reluctant to recommend that a change in employers might be the only answer if your career is stymied in a company or if the outlook for the organization is questionable.

Tidbits

The Diola, an ethnic group in southwestern Senegal, initiates its males into manhood in a secret ritual that lasts two months, says National Geographic. Each village conducts the ceremony only once every 15 to 30 years.

Tons of pearls too flawed or tiny for jewelry are ground into medicines, cosmetics, and toothpaste in Japan and China, National Geographic reports. Calcium carbonate tablets containing pearls are sold in Japan for everything from pregnancies to tooth cavities.

The world's oldest known rocks dated at 3.8 billion years, are at Isua in western Greenland, says National Geographic.

In its capacity as an Outplacement Consulting firm, Costello, Erdlen assists terminated employees in finding new positions. On numerous occasions, they have found that an individual's discontent in a job had been responsible for poor performance which eventually led to his or her release.

"In many instances, careers with prior employers might have been saved if people had taken some direct action to increase their skill level," Erdlen explains. "Not everyone can reach the top, but there is always room for a significant degree of improvement."

(Note: John D. Erdlen is Chairman of Costello, Erdlen & Company, located in Wellesley, Mass., and the former Executive Director of the Employment Management Association, a non-profit organization comprised of employment executives with many of the nation's leading industries and institutions. In addition, his firm has provided outplacement and career counseling services for hundreds of national and international corporations. He is the author of several books and numerous articles on the subject of job hunting.)

Lipizzan horses in Boston

Every Saturday and Sunday from the first weekend in April through the last weekend in October, the Massachusetts Horse Guard parades internationally acclaimed Austrian Lipizzan horses along the Freedom Trail in Boston. Following is the route of the procession:

1) The Horse Platoon begins their procession promptly at 12:20 p.m. from the Bunker Hill Monument. Escorted by Boston police, they trot directly past Old Ironsides.

2) Crossing the Charlestown Bridge into the North End, they ride down Commercial Street and continue under the Southeast Expressway and by Faneuil Hall and Quincy Market.

3) Taking a right on State Street and a left on Tremont Street, they pass the Old Granary Burying Ground.

4) Taking a left on Winter Street and a left on Washington Street they pass directly through Downtown Crossing.

5) They then take a left on Bromfield Street, a left on Tremont Street, and a right at the Park Street church, arriving at the State House at precisely 1:00 p.m. It is at this time that the "Changing of the Colors" ceremony takes place in a ceremony of horses, foot soldiers, music, and artillery.

Free guide to tenants

Each fall thousands of tenants move in or out of apartments in Massachusetts, and the problems they encounter with their landlords account for the number one source of inquiry received by the Executive Office of Consumer Affairs and Business Regulation (EOCABR) every September.

The EOCABR publishes a free guide to tenants' rights, "The Tenant's Commandments." The pamphlet explains the different types of tenancies and rental agreements, security deposit and last month's rent laws, the eviction process and state condominium conversion laws.

Provisions of the State Sanitary Code which entitles a tenant to safe and habitable living conditions are also included.

"The consumer's best protection is to be informed. The 'Tenants Commandments' pamphlet will be helpful to both first time renters and to those who are currently renting," said Gold.

Consumers can request a free copy of the pamphlet by contacting Gold's office: Tenant's Commandments, Executive Office of Consumer Affairs and Business Regulation, One Ashburton Place, Boston, MA 02108. Telephone (617) 727-7780.

Sign up for a secure future

At most banks, it's still called "teller." But at BayBanks, we're too progressive to leave it at that. So as a Customer Service Representative, along with handling our customers' daily transactions, you'll have the valuable opportunity to receive paid training. You will learn about our products and services, and have the opportunity to suggest those most appropriate to meet each customer's needs.

But the benefits are something we haven't changed. They're comprehensive and offered to any customer service rep working at least 20 hours per week; paid holidays and vacation, medical insurance, paid personal and sick days, tuition reimbursement, life and accident insurances, a retirement/pension plan, and more.
